Mrs. Werner's Classroom News

NOTES

Have a fantastic and restful long weekend! When we come back on Tuesday, it will be the end of February already and we will be gearing up for Read Across America!

WHAT WE ARE LEARNING

ELA: We read Officer Buckle and Gloria this week and laughed so hard as we practiced cause and effect with this hilarious story. Next week, we will learn more about schwa vowels, varying the way we start sentences and abbreviations. We are almost finished with our first draft of our fables as well! We will be revising and writing final drafts next week!

Science: We were amazed to discover that there are Earth materials that are even smaller than sand and silt this week. We experimented and explored with silt and clay! Did you know that both are actually composed of very small rocks? Next week, we will continue to learn about clay and how rocks are used in our environment!

Math: We are loving our money unit so far! We are learning all about pennies, nickels, dimes and quarters. We have discussed the faces of each coin and practiced identifying. We are also learning the value of each coin and will continue to work with adding up change next week!
